

LICKING VALLEY COURIER.

VOLUME 3. NO. 20.

WEST LIBERTY, MORGAN COUNTY, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1912.

WHOLE NUMBER 124

A Dozen Reasons

Why I Should Vote Against President Taft.

BECAUSE:

- 1.—He signed the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Bill, and referred to it as the best tariff law ever enacted.
- 2.—He vetoed the Farmers' Free List Bill, the Woolen Bill, and other bills reducing excessive tariff duties.
- 3.—He has failed to take any steps to lessen the present high cost of living.
- 4.—He supported Ballinger in his efforts to turn rich coal deposits in Alaska over to the Guggenheims.
- 5.—He has used federal patronage to maintain a political machine manipulated in his behalf.
- 6.—He abandoned his official duties to enter into an undignified scramble with his predecessor for re-nomination.
- 7.—He has lost the confidence of his party and of the people.
- 8.—He failed to support Dr. Wiley in his administration of the Pure Food Law.
- 9.—His trust policy has helped the trusts and brought no relief to the people.
- 10.—His administration has resulted in disappointment and failure.
- 11.—He is a reactionary.
- 12.—Ex-President Roosevelt, who knows him best, says of him: "He has proved faithless to the cause of the American people."

Why I Should Vote Against Ex-President Roosevelt.

BECAUSE:

- 1.—He has broken his solemn promise not to be a candidate for a third term, therefore his other promises are not to be relied upon.
- 2.—For seven years he was president and during those seven years the very conditions he now pretends to combat viciously, were more thoroughly developed than during all the other periods in the country's history.
- 3.—The day he became president there were 149 trusts or combinations, capitalized at $3,000,000,000, and the day he retired from office there were 1,030 such combinations, capitalized at $31,000,000,000.
- 4.—He permitted the Steel Trust to acquire the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, its principal rival, in violation of the anti-trust law, and forbade the prosecution of the Harvester Trust at the request of George W. Perkins, HIS PRESENT NATIONAL CHAIRMAN.
- 5.—The man next to Roosevelt, responsible for the third term movement is Geo. W. Perkins, Perkins is the promoter and defender of the most pernicious trusts in the United States, which are the most vicious imposters on the men, women and children wage earners of the country.
- 6.—He urges the legalization of trust watered stock and monopoly, as first advocated by PERKINS, HIS PRINCIPAL SUPPORTER AND FINANCIAL BACKER.
- 7.—He accepted campaign contributions from trusts, insurance companies and "crooked business," and denied that he had done so—"My dear Harriman," H stands for "Bess," Fling "Boss" Woodruff and other "Bosses" who serve him.

8.—During the seven years he was president, he failed, even refused, to lift a finger against high tariff. Who believes, if elected he would try to reduce excessive tariff taxes? Why is he surrounded now by high tariff men, who are contributing freely to his campaign fund?

9.—He loves war better than peace.

10.—Out of office he promises too much, and in office performs too little.

11.—He says that the small farmer and the laborer of the city are not to be mentioned in the same breath with cowboys, etc. After describing the drunkenness and deadly shooting affrays of the cowboys, he writes:

"But they are MUCH BETTER FELLOWS and PLEASANTER COMPANIONS than the small farmers or agricultural laborers; nor are the MECHANICS of a GREAT CITY TO BE MENTIONED IN THE SAME BREATH WITH THEM."

Why I Should Vote For Next President Wilson.

BECAUSE:

- 1.—He is the only candidate for President who represents the real, the vital and the effective progressive forces in this country.
- 2.—He stands for tariff revision downward in the interest of lower prices and the elimination of monopoly.
- 3.—He stands for trust legislation which will prevent the control of prices through any sort of monopoly.
- 4.—He stands for the income tax and believes that wealth should share the burdens as well as the blessings of government.
- 5.—He stands for the rights of labor and the protection of him who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow, as shown in his record as Governor of New Jersey.
- 6.—He stands for the revival of our merchant marine, and for the government encouragement of agriculture, industrial and vocational education.
- 7.—He trusts the people and believes that the governed should govern; and that Senators should be chosen by the people.
- 8.—He faithfully performs in office the promises made out of office.
- 9.—He will "CLEAN HOUSE" at Washington as he has "CLEANED HOUSES" in New Jersey.
- 10.—He preaches and practices clean politics, and practices it effectively. He unalterably opposes machine politics and the rule of the bosses.
- 11.—He stands for legitimate big business every day, but for monopoly never.
- 12.—As Senator La Follette says, "He approaches every problem with the solemn promise to be really, in the highest sense, a servant of the people."

School Notes.

Six weeks of the West Liberty High School have now gone by. We, as teachers and students, look back upon the short period with feelings of regret or satisfaction according to the manner in which we have spent the time. Some of us have made the most of our opportunities, while some have failed to see the advantages that youth offers us and as a result are forced to say within ourselves, "I did not do the best I could." To such ones we would say: "Let the past bury its dead, but look to the future for opportunities to develop the best that is within you." Life is a long, continuous journey over which we pass but a single time and if we have an opportunity to do well, it is our duty to do it, for we never pass along the same way again. And to the parents of the boys and girls in our school we wish to say that it is your duty to help the children see the need of using every advantage that comes to them, for afterwards they will be men and women with other things to busy their minds besides trying to get ready for life with its duties and responsibilities.

We also take this opportunity to invite you to join us in our efforts to make the school grounds more inviting and pleasant for your children by planting trees on the campus November 15th. The grounds now look bare and uninviting, but when covered with trees and pleasant shades it will present a more favorable appearance and thus stimulate the pupils to more determined efforts. Just make up your minds that you will plant at least one tree in the grounds, and when the 15th comes be there to join the many who have assured us of their help to beautify the grounds.

Some may think they have reasons to feel that they are justified in refusing to aid an institution in which they are interested, but have not been permitted to run in accordance with their own opinion. But remember that self-sacrificing often brings more real joy than having ones way. For remember that: "His easy to be pleasant, When life flows along like a song;

But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong;
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And the smile that is worth the praise of the earth
Is the smile that shines through tears."

Please accept the following little story from the little people whom we are trying to teach to think and put their thoughts on paper. This one was written after the pupils had been told to describe a day in the woods in the autumn.

CHESTNUT HUNTING.

It was agreed among us school boys that we should go chestnut hunting Sat. Oct. 12. That morning we awoke earlier than usual. We had our dinners prepared, as we intended to spend the day in the woods. When our dinners were prepared we started on our journey. It was a clear beautiful morning and the birds were singing gayly. Large flocks of birds flew over our heads getting ready for their journey South. There was a haze at the summit of the distant hills, and the air was laden with the breath of the dying flowers.

When we reached the woods, we were overjoyed to find that Jack Frost had painted the leaves so many different colors. Some were yellow, some were red and some were still green.

When we reached the place where the chestnuts were to be found we hung up our dinners and hunted till noon, then after eating a hearty dinner, we continued at our work until late in the afternoon. Then we started home as the light was fading in the west. The clouds that floated near sunset were painted many different colors. Some were of a golden color and some were white. On our way home we gathered many beautiful leaves. We had all the chestnuts that we could carry. When we reached home it was getting dusk. We all enjoyed our trip very much after so long a journey.

Mr. Meek Here.

Warren M. Meek, of Thelma, representing the Agricultural Department of Kentucky, was here Saturday till Monday making preliminary arrangements for holding a Farmers Institute at this place Nov. 6-7.

Mr. Meek was formerly a newspaper man and that is sufficient to say regarding his qualifications for the position he holds.

The indications are that a record breaking crowd will attend this institute and that new subjects will be discussed and the farmers of Morgan county will have an opportunity to hear something they have never heard before. In all six lectures will be present, among them a lady lecturer of national prominence and a representative of the Good Roads Department and the department of Forestry.

These lecturers are free and he or she who fails to hear them stands in their own light.

Noted Author Here.

Wm. H. Lewis, Scholar, Author and traveler, of Niles Mich., is taking a few weeks rest at the Cole hotel.

Mr. Lewis' latest work, the title of which we are unable to give, will soon be in the hands of the printer and everybody in West Liberty ought to get a copy as soon as it is published, from the fact that part of it was written in this town for no other reason. But, judging from our acquaintance with the Author, the book will have many other features to recommend it to the public generally and especially to students of Biology.

A school boy wrote an essay telling how a little boy made friends with a goat. One day when the boy was sitting on the river bank the goat butted him into stream and he drowned. The question, which is the goat Mr. Taft or Mr. Roosevelt, or both?—Commoner.

Practically the entire population of Gary, Ind., attended the funeral of Billy Rugh, the newsboy who gave his crippled leg that the skin might be grafted on the body of an afflicted girl, thereby saving her life.

Jas. M. Elam is headquarters for counter supplies, Leader and Repeater and razors.

Local and Personal.

Go to Keeton's for Cheese Sandwiches.
Frank Day, of Alice, was in town Saturday.

Newt Perry, of Pomp, was in town on business Saturday.

Ira M. Nickell, of Panama, was in town on business Saturday.

Miss Ellice Fugett, was a business visitor at our office Saturday.

W. T. Caskey, of Lenox, was a business visitor in town Monday.

Attorney, John B. Phipps, was in Frankfort on business last week.

Mrs. Grace Gevedon, has been very sick, but is able to be out again.

Everybody's going to do it. What? Attend the "Old Fiddlers' Contest."

De Witt C. Ferguson, of Pekin was a business caller at our office Monday.

Mrs. A. N. Casco is visiting her brother-in-law, John R. Bays, at Lexington.

Attorney, S. M. R. Hurt, was at Yocum and Wrigley on legal business Tuesday.

Are you going to the box supper at Pomp Friday night? Everybody else is going.

Crit Smallwood, who has been in Washington for two years has returned home.

Willie Williams, of Alice, paid the Courier crew a pleasant visit while in town Saturday.

Mrs. Ella Toliver and little son, of Morehead, are visiting relatives in town and county.

Misses Mollie Day and Minnie Barker came in Monday night to see how we make Couriers.

If you don't come early you won't be able to get a seat at the "Old Fiddlers' Contest" the 26th.

Dr. W. G. Carter, who has been very sick, is much improved and is able to be out again.

Willie Elam, of Index, came in while in town Saturday and gave us an order for stationery.

Tom and Jim Cottle, of Forest, left Friday with a bunch of mules for the Mt. Sterling Market.

J. Taylor Day, a prominent merchant of Cannel City was here on business the first of the week.

Wiley May, the show-man, of White Oak, was in town Monday and gave us a nice order for job work.

Mrs. Dorsa Keeton and children are visiting relatives and friends in Salsersville and the country surrounding.

T. J. Daniel, who is working for the Kentucky River Hardwood Co. at Quicksand, is spending a few days at home.

Misses Kathleen Steele and Hattie Adams returned Monday from a few days visit to relatives and friends at Wrigley.

Greenberry Carter, of Frenchburg, was the guest of his brother-in-law, L. T. Hovernal and family Thursday night.

Mrs. L. D. Steele and little son Carl left last week for Columbus, O., where they will join their husband and father and make their future home.

Floyd Long and family, formerly of this county but who now lives at Middletown, O. have been visiting relatives on Caney and Grassy Creeks.

Misses Flora Hovernal, Della Casity, Maud and Cassie Wells have the thanks of the Courier crew for assistance rendered in mailing out the last issue of the paper.

Mrs. Joo. B. Phipps entertained at five o'clock dinner Monday afternoon; the guests present were Prof. and Mrs. Cisco, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Daniel and Mrs. J. D. Lykins.

Miss Marksberry, of Harrodsburg, will arrive Nov. 1st to take charge of the election department of the West Liberty High School. She comes highly recommended.

Remember well and bear in mind, A first class printer is hard to find. But we have him—if you don't believe it give us your jobs and we'll convince you.

J. W. Ferguson, of the firm of L. P. Hailey & Co., of Licking River, came in Tuesday and subscribed for the Courier and also gave us an order for 500 letter heads for his firm.

Esq. G. W. Phillips brought into our office Saturday morning a vegetable curiosity in the form of a twin potato, the two united by a slender neck and both perfectly formed.

Jaf. Hamilton, of Silver Hill, was in our town the first of the week. Mr. Hamilton informed us that he would leave for New Orleans in two or three weeks to accept a position with an insurance company.

Assessor John Patrick, of Grassy Creek, and J. P. Haney met in our office Tuesday, whether by accident or pre-arrangement, we are unable to say. We will not repeat their conversation. Suffice to say that it was extremely interesting.

AT THE BIG STORE!

For the past 14 years we have been serving you—as a supplier of your needs—in the mercantile line. During all this time we have endeavored to deal honestly and squarely with all. Whether we have succeeded in this we leave to your judgment. Suffice to say that we are at the same old stand, doing business in the same old way, able to furnish you with dependable merchandise of all kinds.

We offer you nothing but First-class Goods in every line at the lowest possible prices.

Having had such a large experience in buying for this community, we flatter ourselves that we know your wants, and, this season, we have made unusual selections.

We have just returned from Cincinnati, and offer you nothing but strictly stylish and up-to-date merchandise. We have the celebrated "Cluett" brand of shirts, the "Arrow" brand of collars—the standard of shirts and collars the world over.

The Selby Shoe Company's shoes for ladies are known and sold in every city in the United States. Will you not allow us to fit you with the latest styles in footwear? In buying this shoe you not only get the latest style, but you have the best wearing shoe money can buy.

We are headquarters, and our stock is now complete with a full line of Dry Goods, Notions, Clothing, Shoes, Hats and everything found in a first-class Department Store.

Wont you come in and inspect our stock? We can supply your wants in every line and we assure you that you will receive nothing but first-class goods at the very lowest prices. Remember that we carry the largest stock of goods in this whole section, and that your every want can be supplied at our store. Come in.

Yours for business,
C. W. WOMACK.

LISTEN!

Ting-Tang-Tong-Tung

"Old Dan Tucker," "Sourwood Mountain," "Fisher's Hornpipe," and goodness knows how many more!

You'll hear 'em all at the Old Eiddlers' Contest
SATURDAY NIGHT
Don't fail to come. You'll be so lonesome if you stay away.

We are informed that J. D. Lykins, who has been confined to his room for several months with rheumatism, is improving rapidly and it is hoped that he will soon be able to resume his work in the Circuit Clerk's office and as deputy Master Commissioner.

THE MUSICAL RECITAL

The musical recital given by the music class of Mrs. Kathryn Daniel, at the High School Auditorium Saturday night, was a perfectly planned and splendidly executed entertainment. The pupils showed the excellence of their training in the skill of their performance. The entertainment was a delightful one and reflects great credit upon Mrs. Daniel and her pupils.

WEDDING BELLS.

Mr. Edgar Cochran and Miss Adah Caraway were quietly married Saturday at 10 o'clock p. m. at the home of the brides sister, Mrs. Henry Cole, Rev. Charles K. Spell, pastor of the Methodist Church at this place officiating.

The Courier joins with the many friends of the happy pair in extending felicitations and wishing them happiness and success.

Millie, One of The Famous Millie-Christine Twins, Dies.

Those in this county who remember seeing the famous twins when they were on exhibition in this city several years ago when they were here with the Bostock Carnival Co., will be interested in the following press dispatch from Wilmington, N. C., of Oct. 10:

"Death Wednesday claimed Millie, one of the famous Millie-Christine twins, known all over the world, while Christine still lives.

Wonder who did the voting
in the Lexington primary last Saturday.

We would rather be a base ball
player on the world's champion
team, the "Boston Red Sox,"
than to be a wounded candidate
for President on the bull moose ticket.

All of the alleged assassins of Ed Calahan are now behind the bars of the Breathitt county
barracks. But what's the use of all this trouble? We predict a wholesale jail-delivery in Jackson
one of these days.

"Infant industries" in Heaven's name! Aint you sorry for that striding "Standard Oil,"
which has lately undergone a
painful process of dissolution?
And the "Steel Trust"—babbling
babe.

Owsley Stanley ought to spend
sleepless nights over the way
he and his Committee have been
spanking the puny weakling.

Poor little innocents, all of
them, but then there have always been hard hearted, inconsiderate people and there always will be. For shame.

Quietly but steadily the development of Morgan County's resources goes on. The old order of things is gradually being reversed. Our people are learning that,
"to pull together is best for all."

Business antagonism which formerly characterized a great many of our citizens seems to be dying
out and the spirit of "live and let
live" is becoming more manifest. Speed the day when each
and every business man in the county will recognize the fact
that our interests are communal,
and be willing to cooperate heartily with each other in the upbuilding of our county and its varied industries.

FORTY THOUSAND ALREADY PLEDGED.

The Wilson National Progressive League, headed by Rudolph Speckles, the wealthy San Francisco reformer, has secured the pledges of forty thousand Republicans to support Governor Wilson.
These men were deeply disappointed that the Republican Convention did not name a progressive, but they declined to follow
Roosevelt out of the party as they had no sympathy with the third term movement. The League is offered by such men as Dr. Willey, the former government pure
food man, Senator Blaine, the law
partner of LaFollette, and others
fully as prominent in the republican party.

VERY, VERY INNOCENT.

Colonel Roosevelt testified before the Senate Investigating Committee that he was not personally aware of any specific contribution to his campaign fund
and that he made no promises or concessions to anyone. If all these who believe that statement
were required to stand on their

heads the number would not occasion any special comment.
Everybody knows that the interests are not in the habit of throwing money at the birds. They would not have given millions
without some promise of protection. They are two well versed
in business to make a bad investment of so much money.

EGO COLLOSSO!

There lives in this world to-day
no such colossal egotist as Theodore Roosevelt. Search all history, tradition, Mythology, his
peer along this unenviable line
cannot be found. Within the next ten thousand years, if
civilization should last that long,
there will not arise another to take his place. Intellectual,
forceful, intrepid, brave beyond
a doubt, but paramount to these
is his o'ermastering love for the spotlight—his prurient desire for applause. Having been honored
by the people of the United States
as no other man has been honored in his day, he dramatically
tossed his sombrero into the ring
and sallied forth seeking new
worlds to conquer and new people
to subdue. Figuratively speaking, that is what his present campaign for the presidency means.

Col. Roosevelt's actions at Milwaukee, after being fired upon
by a crazy, would-be assassin
and seriously if not dangerously
wounded, proves beyond a doubt that the shootee, as well as the
shooter was also crazy: a mono-
maniac whose one desire is unlimited power and who, if elected President, would not hesitate to assume an absolute dictatorship
over the United States or even to proclaim himself king.

No thinking man any longer
believes that Roosevelt is a patriot. His love of country and its institutions, his solicitude for the great common people is swallowed up in his love of self, and his statement made upon the platform of the Auditorium at Milwaukee when he opened his coat and exhibited his bloody
shirt to the audience, saying that he didn't care a rap whether he was shot or not; that his thoughts were not of self but of his country and the principles he represented; These statements
and his actions on that occasion
prove, to an analytical mind
the exact contrary to what the
wily actor hoped and intended.

II

The shooting of Col. Roosevelt was singularly unfortunate. It would have been much more unfortunate if he had been killed.
The assassination, or the attempted assassination of any man,
under any circumstances, is deplorable. The attempted assassination of the former President
is peculiarly unfortunate at this time from the fact that he will
not fail to make political capital
out of the incident, and to pose as
a martyr to a great principle,
thereby further inflaming the
morbid imaginations of an over-
credulous and a hero-worshipping
people.

But let not the public be deceived. The doughty Colonel is a four-flusher. Patriotism is his ruling passion no more.

What Americans Would Save.

The Tariff Reform Committee
is prosecuting an investigation of the difference in American manufactures sold abroad and to domestic consumers and finds that
it is a conservative estimate that
the American consumer is discriminated against in favor of the foreigner to the extent of not less than $2,000,000,000 a year,
or $100 for every family in the United States. In other words that amount would remain in the
pockets of home consumers each
year under a proper downward
revision of the tariff, which would then yield more to pay the
expenses of an economically administered government than the
high tariff does now, which in
many cases goes into the coffers
of the trusts and favored interests without contributing to the support of the government.

It will thus be seen what a terrific tax we are paying for high protection. A vote for Wilson and Marshall and the Democratic nominees for Congress will insure a speedy and material reduction upon the necessities of life

and put on the free list trust controlled products and articles of American manufacture, which
are sold abroad more cheaply than
at home.

In last week's issue of the Courier appeared the announcement
of W. French May, of Henry, one of our best and most substantial
citizens for the democratic nomination for Assessor of Morgan county.

In presenting Mr. May's claims
for recognition at the hands of the party he has served so faithful and so well, we do so with the full knowledge that he has not been a chronic office seeker—has not worried his people by persistently asking their suffrage.

Mr. May is a man past middle age; has been a hard working honest farmer, and now in the evening-tide of life he asks his fellow citizens with whom he has labored
and toiled to give him this nomination, vouchsafing to them that if he is nominated and elected he
will be their faithful public servant and that they will have no
cause to regret their choice.

We ask for him the thoughtful,
consideration of the people.

The parcels post law goes into effect Jan. 1, 1913. The effect
will be, judging from other countries in which it has been tried,
not to drive the country merchant out of business, as the opponents of the law would make
believe, but to give the progressive, up-to-date merchant an opportunity to distribute his wares.
It is true that some merchants
will suffer because of the operations of the law. The merchant
who advertises judiciously and
lets the public know what he has
to sell and keeps abreast of the times in the selection of his stock
will have nothing to fear from the parcels post. On the contrary
it will redound greatly to his
advantage by opening up for him
a much larger field. Every business house in the country will
then have an opportunity to become to a mail order house, provided it keeps what the people
want and lets them know it
through the necessary medium of printer's ink. But the non-advertising merchant will be in a hard row. Standing in his own light he will take his chances on
running his business in the same old way. He will depend upon what he considers his regular customers until they begin to realize that there are other firms
offering a greater variety and a
more modern and up-to-date
stock from which to choose, when
they will loose the false sentiment that formerly bound them
to one man and one store and
begin to buy of, either the mail
order houses or the progressive home merchant. Then will his former business begin to dwindle,
and his former prestige to take its flight. Too late he will realize that his strict adherence to old
business traditions was the beginning of his downfall; that his
penny-wise and pound-foolish
policy was based upon a false
idea of economy.

But this is a progressive age
and he who would keep up with
the procession must get in the van.

HOME, SWEET HOME.
There's an old song and a true one and
you've heard it all your life—
"There's no place like home."
When you've got ten kids and a great big
ugly wife
There's no place like home.
Your mother-in-law comes over and stays
six months at a time,
And all that's left of last month's pay is
but a paltry dime,
And if you kick she'll smash you, while
your wife will join in line,
O, there's no place like home.
If you get a little full it is nice to have a
wife,
There's no place like home;
She is waiting there to carve you with a
great big butcher-knife,
Oh, there's no place like home;
You take refuge in the stable, just to avoid
a fight,
A policeman sees you running and takes
you in on sight,
And takes you to the station house and
keeps you over night,
There's no place like home.
When you work all day long and at night
are dead for rest,
There's no place like home;
The baby takes the crib and it yells its
level best,
There's no place like home,
Your wife she shouts: "You bummer, get
up and get a back,
Go and get a doctor and be sure he is no
quack!"
You get up to pat your boots on and jump
upon a tack,
Oh, there's no place like home.
When the hired girl gets mad, and for a
job is lo'ing,
There's no place like home;
Your own dear little wife says that she
will do the cooking,
There's no place like home;
The bread has consumption and the homi-
has the "ager."
The beefsteak is so tough you can't cut it
with a sabre,
And the butter is as strong as a true-blue
Knight of Labor,
Oh, there's no place like home.

GUMPTION
Which is Common Sense without ostentatious Furbelows.

Bustin' into Poetry.

Somehow, I've never been able to invoke the Muse. Ever
in the days of callow youth when
a pair of blue eyes, or black, or brown, or gray, would send my heart-beats up into the hundreds
per minute, I could never put my adoration into rhyme, or make jingles to describe her black, or brown, or blonde hair. All my love-making had to be done in halting prose. Sometimes, it is true, I would borrow from Moor-
or Byron, or, in desperate cases,
from Ella Wheeler Wilcox, but never could I drag from my own
think-tank the fitting, limpic
verse that flows so easily from
the poets' brain.

Perhaps it was environment.
Until coming to West Liberty I
had never come in personal contact with poets, and had to get

my inspiration from the cold type
of the still colder (let us hope)
poets. But here it is different.
Here the school girls write poetry. Maybe the boys do, too, but I am not in their confidences.
Even the gas man writes verse,
though that is not strange when
we consider his expertness in making the "meter" move. Our country correspondents sometimes
clothe their thought in rhyme,
and, under great provocation,
the editor grinds out verse. But the Muse (she must be feminine)
turns away from me; the divine
afflatus refuses to give down.

There is something in real
poetry that appeals to the soul of
man. The soaring genius of the true poet is so far above us ordinary mortals that we grope and
stumble in our attempts to follow them. I have always regretted that Coleridge's dope
dream was not of sufficient duration to have finished Kubla Khan. And can any one conceive that a normal mind could produce The Raven? Byron's
death deprived the world of the ending of Don Juan. Burn's
broad Scotch made his sweetest
thoughts hard to grasp, but the masterpieces of all the poets lift
us up from the common things
carry us to a realm of thought
and feeling that we would not otherwise attain.

But, as usual, I am digressing.
I sat down to write of the local
poets and their influence upon me.
I suppose the desire to perpetrate
rhyme is natural under the circumstances. The effect of associations is strong. The thoughts of others, however expressed, influences our own acts. Beethoven's tender symphonies arouses
the latent good within us while Wagner's crashing chords make us conscious of the primitive that is in us. However, my knowledge of music is limited, and I
scarcely know the difference between a fiddle and a violin, but I am keenly sensitive to harmonious sounds. Likewise, I have acquired an intense yearning to bust into poetry. Maybe it will better to begin by transposing or paraphrasing. Some say that you don't have to learn to write poetry; you just write it. But I am extremely modest, and in
inflicting you with the following
I claim no credit, but rather refer you to Byron's reference to Southey in the last lines of the first Canto of Don Juan.

HOME, SWEET HOME.
There's an old song and a true one and
you've heard it all your life—
"There's no place like home."
When you've got ten kids and a great big
ugly wife
There's no place like home.
Your mother-in-law comes over and stays
six months at a time,
And all that's left of last month's pay is
but a paltry dime,
And if you kick she'll smash you, while
your wife will join in line,
O, there's no place like home.
If you get a little full it is nice to have a
wife,
There's no place like home;
She is waiting there to carve you with a
great big butcher-knife,
Oh, there's no place like home;
You take refuge in the stable, just to avoid
a fight,
A policeman sees you running and takes
you in on sight,
And takes you to the station house and
keeps you over night,
There's no place like home.
When you work all day long and at night
are dead for rest,
There's no place like home;
The baby takes the crib and it yells its
level best,
There's no place like home,
Your wife she shouts: "You bummer, get
up and get a back,
Go and get a doctor and be sure he is no
quack!"
You get up to pat your boots on and jump
upon a tack,
Oh, there's no place like home.
When the hired girl gets mad, and for a
job is lo'ing,
There's no place like home;
Your own dear little wife says that she
will do the cooking,
There's no place like home;
The bread has consumption and the homi-
has the "ager."
The beefsteak is so tough you can't cut it
with a sabre,
And the butter is as strong as a true-blue
Knight of Labor,
Oh, there's no place like home.

Will You Spend ONE DOLLAR to Elect Wilson President?

How deep is your conviction that this government ought to be in new hands, in clean hands?

How much are you in favor of a clean slate from Wilson and Marshall clear down
the line to the very smallest offices in your locality?

The Democratic National Committee has every reason to believe that every progressive voter is willing to spend a dollar to elect Wilson and Marshall and their ticket.

And that thousands are anxious to contribute to the Wilson Campaign Fund in amounts of $2, $5, $10 and $20.

To such we make our appeal. To such we must look for victory.

Time An Important Factor

This is another case where time is money.
The enemy have their funds—supplied instantly by
the interests.

We have only a few days and contributions to be effective must be received at once.
There is no question of the money of the People being able to defeat the money of the Trusts.

Because it is greater even in volume and will be used in straightforward telling ways.

But to be effective it must be received and used within
the next few days.

Quick action is absolutely necessary. Let us have your contribution or the list you make up from your friends and
co-workers today if possible, tomorrow sure.

How Your Money Will Be Spent

Woodrow Wilson, our standard bearer, has never had
the time or disposition to talk about himself.

He has never used spectacular methods to place himself
in the spotlight.

His greatest work has been done without ostentation, in
the most expeditious, dignified manner.

The great mass of voters do not know what a really great man Wilson is. They do not know all he has done.
They do not understand all the features of his platform.
We must tell them.

To educate this great nation of voters, especially the clear thinking Independent Democrats, Republicans and Progressives who choose their leader on his merits, means
the expenditure of a vast amount of money.

We propose to use your dollars in just this way—
judiciously, and without a penny frittered away for an unnecessary item.

We know you have confidence we will do this thing—and
successfully.

Why the Dollar Counts

In this campaign the issues lie between the forces of Representative Government and Popular Government.

In Representative Government only a part of the people
have influence—those with no political faith, who spend
fortunes in any direction where their own ends are furthered for money.

In Popular Government all the people have influence,
because their executives and legislators do not dare to
thwart the expressed will of the people.

Representative Government, as ever, this year is being supported by the money of the interests. It is being spent lavishly to give the voters a wrong impression of Wilson.

Popular Government, this year, to win, must depend on the truth being told about Wilson. We must publish his record
and platform broadcast so that no one can controvert it.

* Your $1, your $2, your $5, your $10 or $20 will count and count to win if spent in this work.

the benighted and perverse republicans of the Eleventh district have become ashamed that
they once stood sponsor for cable.
And if signs do not fail, that district will, for the first time,
elect a democrat to Congress.

At any rate it ought to elect a democrat or a decent republican
who is free from the shadow of a crime.

And if the same republican
party in that district that once
endorsed powers and his crime,
have felt the leavening influence
of good doctrine sufficiently to bring them penitently to the Lord's side, what may we not expect from the other portions
of this great nation, where light
has heretofore been shed and
where reason sometimes rules?

It looks as though we might just
as well make the election of Wilson unanimous.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Elam Harshaw, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 25th birthday with a friendly crowd of miners at the Grassy Creek Tavern. He is a general favorite, a hero and a plowman in the new country. The dance leads to heavy drinking, in which over $1000 is staked. Harshaw loses his money and his mine but wins the mad contract of the district.

CHAPTER II.—Burning Daylight starts on his trip to deliver the mail with dogs and sledges. He tells his friends that the big Yukon gold strike will soon be on, and he intends to be in it at the start. With Indian attendants and dogs he dips over the bank and down the frozen Yukon and in the gray light is gone.

CHAPTER III.—Harshaw makes a sensational rapid run across country, a feat which appears at the time to be another characteristic celebration. He has made a record against cold and exhaustion and is now resting in John's friends in a dash to the new gold fields.

CHAPTER IV.—Harshaw decides where the gold will be found in the upper district and buys two tons of flour which he declares will be worth its weight in gold before the season is over.

CHAPTER V.—When Daylight arrives with his heavy outfit of flour he finds the big flat desert of the hills covered with gold and Harshaw reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, begins investing in corner lots and striking other miners and becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike.

CHAPTER VI.—Harshaw makes fortune after fortune. One lucky investment enables him to defeat a great combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He determines to return to the States and gives a farewell celebration to his friends that is remembered as a kind of blaze of glory.

CHAPTER VII.—The papers are full of "The King of the Klondike," and Daylight is feted by the money magnates of the country. They are all anxious to get a copper deal and the Alaskan pioneer finds himself amid the bewildering complications of big finance.

CHAPTER VIII.—Daylight is lured by the moneyed men and finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to meet his disloyal business partners at their offices in New York City.

CHAPTER IX.—Confronting his partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if they refuse to return to Alaska. They are forced into submission, return their things and Harshaw goes back to San Francisco with his unimpaired fortune.

CHAPTER X.—Daylight meets his fate in Dede Mason, a pretty stenographer with a crippled brother. When she darts for Harshaw is much attracted towards her and interested in her family affairs.

CHAPTER XI.—He becomes an alien in large investments on the Pacific coast and gets into the political ring. For a great while he is in the hands of the moneyed men and is kept in the country and eventually is attracted back to the old life on the lone some trail.

CHAPTER XII.—Daylight gets a letter from Dede Mason in San Francisco. He makes frequent runs into the country, but his mind is still in the speculation trade. Very often, however, the longing for the simple life wins over him.

CHAPTER XIII.—Dede Mason buys a horse and Daylight meets her in her saddle trips. He begins to indulge in horseback riding and manages to get in to her company quite often.

CHAPTER XIV.—One day Daylight asks Dede to go with him on one more ride. His purpose is to tell her to marry him and they can't wait, she tries to analyze her feelings.

CHAPTER XV.—Dede tells Daylight that she likes him but that her heart could not lie with a money manipulator. She suggests the vast gold he could do with his wealth if he so inclined.

CHAPTER XVI.—For the sake of his love, Daylight undertakes the scheme of building up a great industrial community among the hills. He wins her respect by interesting himself in her crippled brother.

In the weeks that followed, Daylight was a busy man. It meant quick work on a colossal scale, for Oakland and the adjacent country was not slow to feel the tremendous buying. But Daylight had the ready cash and it had always been his policy to strike quickly. Before the others could get the warning of the boom, he quietly accomplished many things. At the same time that his agents were purchasing corner lots and entire blocks in the heart of the business section and the waste lands for factory sites, Daylight was rushing franchises through the city council, capturing the two exhausted water companies and the eight or nine independent street railways, and getting his grip on the Oakland Creek and the bay tide-lands for his dock system. The tide-lands had been in litigation for years, and he took the hall of the horns—buying out the private owners and at the same time leasing from the city fathers. By the time that Oakland was aroused by this unprecedented activity in every direction and was questioning excitedly the meaning of it, Daylight secretly bought the chief Republican newspaper and the chief Democratic organ, and moved boldly into his new offices. Of necessity, they were on a large scale, occupying four floors of the only modern office building in the town—the only building that would be torn down later on as Daylight put it. There was a department after department, a score of them, and hundreds of clerks and stenographers. As he told Dede:—

"I've got more companies than you can shake a stick at. There's the Alameda & Contra Costa Land Syndicate, the Consolidated Street Railways, the Buena Vista Ferry Company, the United Water Company, the Piedmont Realty Company, the Fairview and Portola Hotel Company, and half a dozen more that I've got to refer to a notebook to remember. There's the Piedmont Laundry Farm, and Redwood Consolidated Quarries. Starting in with our quarry, I just kept buying till I got them all. And there's the ship-building company I wish got a name for yet. Seeing as I had to have ferry-boats, I decided to build them myself. They'll be done by the time the pier is ready for them."

For months Daylight was buried in work. The outlay was terrific, and there was nothing coming in. Beyond a general rise in land values, Oakland did not acknowledge his intrusion into financial scene. The city was for him to show what he was his crushing experience, no surprise now when the task was given him to locate the purchaser of a certain sorrel mare. "How high shall I pay for her?" he asked.

"Any price. You've got to get her, that's the point. Drive a sharp bargain so as not to excite suspicion, but get her. Then you deliver her to that address up in Sonoma County. The man's the caretaker on a little ranch I have there. Tell him he's to take whacking good care of her. And after that forget all about it. Don't tell me the name of the man you buy her from. Don't tell me anything about it except that you've got her and delivered her. Saved?"

But the week had not passed, when Daylight noted the flash in Dede's eyes that boded trouble. "Something's gone wrong—what is it?" he said.

"Mab," she said. "The man who bought her has sold her already. If I thought you had anything to do with it—"

"I don't even know who you sold her to," was Daylight's answer. "And what's more, I'm not bothering my head about her. She was your mare, and it's none of my business what you did with her. You haven't got her, that's sure, and worse luck. And now, while we're on touchy subjects, I'm going to open another one with you. And you needn't get touchy about it, for it's not really your business at all. It's about that brother of yours. He needs more than you do for him. Selling that mare of yours won't send him to Germany. And that's what his own doctors say he needs—that crack German specialist who rips a man's bones and muscles into pulp and then moulds them all over again. Well, I want to send him to Germany and give that crack a flutter, that's all."

"If it were only possible!" she said, half breathlessly, and wholly without anger. "Only it isn't, and you know it isn't. I can't accept money from you."

"Now look here, Miss Mason. You've got to get some foolish notion out of your head. This money notion is one of the funniest things I've seen. Suppose you was falling over a cliff, wouldn't it be all right for me to reach out and catch you by the arm? Sure it would. You're standing in your brother's way. No matter what notions you've got in your head, you've got to get out of the way and give him a chance. Will you let me go and see him talk it over with him? I'll make it a hard and fast business proposition. I'll stake him to get well, and that's all, and charge him interest."

She visibly hesitated. "And just remember one thing, Miss Mason: it's his leg, not yours."

Still she refrained from giving her answer, and Daylight went on strengthening his position. "And remember, I go over to see him alone. He's a man, and I can deal with him better without women-folk around. I'll go over tomorrow afternoon."

For six weeks hand-running Daylight had been seeing Dede except in the office, where he resolutely refrained from making approaches. But by the seventh Sunday his hunger for her overmastered him. It was a stormy day. A heavy south-east gale was blowing, and squalls of equal rain and wind swept over the city. He could not take his mind off her, and a persistent picture came to him of her sitting by a window and sewing feminine fripperies of some sort. When the time came for his pre-lunch cocktail to be served to him in his rooms, he did not take it. Filled with the daring determination, he glanced at his notebook for Dede's telephone number, and called for the switch.

At first it was the landlady's daughter who was raised, but in a minute he heard the voice he had been hungry to hear.

"I just wanted to tell you that I'm coming out to see you," he said. "I didn't want to break in on you without warning, that was all."

"Has something happened?" came her voice.

"I'll tell you when I get there," he evaded.

She came herself to the door to receive him and shake hands with him. He hung his mackintosh and hat on the rack in the comfortable hall and turned to her for direction. "They are busy in there," she said, indicating the parlor, from which came the bustling voices of young people, and through the open door of which he could see several college youths. "So you will have to come into my rooms."

She led the way through the door opening out of the hall to the right, and, once inside, he stood awkwardly rooted to the floor, gazing at him and at her and all the time trying not to gaze. In his perturbation he failed to hear and see her invitation to a seat.

"Won't you sit down?" she repeated. "Look here," he said, in a voice that shook with passion. "There's one thing I won't do, and that's propose to you in the office. That's why I'm here. Dede Mason, I want you, I just want you."

So precipitate was he, that she had barely time to cry out her involuntary alarm and to step back, at the same time catching one of his hands as he attempted to gather her into his arms.

"Oh, I know I'm a sure enough fool," he said. "I—I guess I'll sit down. Don't be scared, Miss Mason. I'm not real dangerous."

"I'm not afraid," she answered, with a smile, slipping down herself into a chair.

"It's funny," Daylight sighed, almost with regret: "here I am, strong enough to bend you around and the knots in my will with man, beast or anything. And here I am sitting in this chair, as weak and helpless as a little lamb. You sure take the starch out of me."

"I wish you hadn't asked," she said softly.

"Mebbe it's best you should know a few things before you give me an answer," he went on, ignoring the fact that the answer had already been given. "I never want another woman before in my life, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The stuff you read about me in the papers and books, about me being a lady-killer, is all wrong. There's not an iota of truth in it. I guess I've done more than my share of card-playing and whisky-drinking, but women I've let alone. There was a woman that killed herself, but I didn't know she wanted her—not for love, but to keep her from killing herself. She was the best of the boiling, but I never gave her any encouragement. I'm telling you all this because you've read about it, and I want you to get it straight from me."

"I can't marry you," she said. "I like you a great deal, but—"

He waited a moment for her to complete the sentence, falling which, he went on himself. "I haven't an exaggerated opinion of myself, so I know I ain't bragging when I say I'll make a pretty good husband. You could follow your own sweet will, and nothing would be too good for you. I'd give you everything your heart desired—"

"Except yourself," she interrupted suddenly, almost sharply. "Don't you see?" she hurried on. "I could have far easier married the Elam Harshaw fresh from Klondike when I first laid eyes on him long ago than marry you sitting before me now."

He shook his head slowly. "That's one too many for me. The more you know and like a man the less you want to marry him. Familiarity breeds contempt—I guess that's what you mean."

"No, no," she cried, but before she could continue, a knock came on the door.

His eyes, quick with observation like an Indian's, darted about the room while she was out. The impression of warmth and comfort and beauty predominated, though he was unable to analyze it; while the simplicity delighted him—expensive simplicity, he decided, and most of it left-overs from the time her father went broke and died.

She re-entered the room, and as she crossed it to her chair, he admired the way she walked, while the bronze slippers were maddening.

"I'd like to ask you several questions," he began immediately. "Are you thinking of marrying somebody else?"

"There isn't anybody else. I don't know anybody I like well enough to marry. For that matter, I don't think I am a marrying woman. Office work seems to spoil me for that."

"It strikes me that you're the most marryingest woman that ever made a man sit up and take notice. And now another question. You see, I've just got to locate the lay of the land. Is there anybody you like as much as you like me?"

But Dede had herself well in hand. "That's unfair," she said. "And if you stop and consider, you will find that you are doing the very thing you disclaimed—namely, nagging. I refuse to answer any more of your questions. Let us talk about other things. How is Bob?"

Half an hour later, whirling along through the rain on Telegraph Avenue toward Oakland, Daylight smoked one of his brown-paper cigarettes and reviewed what had taken place. It was not at all bad, was his summing-up, though there was much about it that was baffling. There was that liking him the more she knew him and at the same time wanting to marry him less. That was a puzzle.

Once again, on a rainy Sunday, weeks afterward, Daylight proposed to Dede. As on the first time, he restrained himself until his hunger for her overwhelmed him and swept him away in his red automobile to Berkeley. He left the machine several blocks away and proceeded to the house on foot. But Dede was out, and the landlady's daughter told him, and added, on second thought, that she was walking in the hills. Furthermore, the young lady directed him where Dede's walk was most likely to extend. Daylight obeyed the girl's instructions, and soon the street he followed passed the last house and itself ceased where began the first steep slopes of the open hills. The air was damp with the on-coming of rain, for the storm had not yet burst, though the rising wind proclaimed its imminence. As far as he could see, there was no sign of Dede on the smooth, grassy hills. To the right, dipping down into a hollow and rising again, was a large, full-grown eucalyptus grove. Here all was noise and movement; the lofty, slender-trunked trees swaying back and forth in the wind and clashing their branches together. In the quagmire above all the minor noises of creaking and groaning, arose a deep thrumming noise as of a mighty harp. Knowing Dede as he did, Daylight was confident that he would find her somewhere in this grove where the storm effects were so pronounced. And find her he did, crest of the opposing slope where the gale smote its fiercest blow.

"It's the same old thing," he said. "I want you and I've come for you."

You've just got to have me, Dede, for the more I think about it the more certain I am that you've got a sneaking liking for me that's something more than just ordinary liking. And you don't fast say that it isn't; now dost you?"

"Please, please," she begged. "We can never marry, so don't let us discuss it."

Daylight decided that action was more efficient than speech. So he stepped between her and the wind and drew her so that she stood close in the shelter of him. An unusually stiff squall blew about them and thrummed overhead in the tree-tops, and both paused to listen. A shower of flying leaves enveloped them, and hard on the heel of the wind came driving drops of rain. He looked down on her and on her hair, wind-blown about her face; and because of her closeness to him and of a fresher and more poignant realization of what she meant to him, he trembled so that she was aware of it in the hand that held hers. She suddenly leaned against him, bowing her head until it rested lightly upon his breast. And so they stood while another squall, with flying leaves and scattered drops of rain, rattled past. With equal suddenness she lifted her head and looked at him.

"Do you know," she said, "I prayed last night about you. I prayed that you would fall, that you would lose everything—everything."

Daylight stared his amazement at this cryptic utterance.

"That sure beats me. I always said I got out of my depth with women, and you've got me out of my depth now. Well, you've just got to explain, that's all."

His arms went around her and held her closely, and this time she did not resist. Her head was bowed, and he could not see her face, yet he had a premonition that she was crying. He had learned the virtue of silence, and he waited her will in the matter. "Things had come to such a pass that she was bound to tell him something now. Of that he was confident."

"I would dearly like to marry you," she faltered, but I am afraid. I am proud and humble at the same time, that a man like you should care for me. But you have too much money. There's where my abominable common sense steps in. Even if we did marry, you could never be my man—my lover and my husband. You would be your money's man. I know I am a foolish woman, but I want my man for myself. And your money destroys you; it makes you less and less nice. I am not ashamed to say that I love you, because I shall never marry you. And I loved you much when I did not know you at all, when you first came down from Alaska and I first went into the office. You were my hero. You were the Burning Daylight of the gold-diggings, the daring traveler and miner. And you looked it. I don't see how any woman could have looked at you without loving you—then. But you don't look it now. You are a man of the open, have been cooping yourself up in the cities with all that means. You are becoming something different, something not so healthy, not so clean, not so nice. Your money and your way of life are doing it. You know it. You haven't the same body now that you had then. You are putting on flesh, and it is not healthy flesh. You are kind and genial with me, I know, but you are not kind and genial to all the world as you were then. You have become harsh and cruel. I do love you, but I cannot marry you and destroy love. You are growing into a thing that I must in the end despise. You can't help it. More than you can possibly love me, do you love this business game. This business—and it's all perfectly useless, so far as you are concerned—claims all of you. I sometimes think it would be easier to share you equitably with another woman than to share you with this business. I might have half of you, at any rate. But this business would claim, not half of you, but nine-tenths of you, or ninety-nine hundredths. You hold back nothing; you put all you've got into whatever you are doing—"

"Limit is the sky," he grunted grim affirmation.

"But if you would only play the lover-husband part that way, I won't say another word," she added. "I've delivered a whole sermon."

Free Seed Testing For Kentucky.

It may not be generally known to farmers and others in Kentucky that the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station is well equipped to test samples that may be submitted with a view to learning their quality, either as to purity or germination. A new laboratory for this work has been planned and is now nearing completion. When our incubators and other appliances are established it will be one of the most complete in this country. The Station has already won a reputation for work of this sort not only in this country, but in Europe, and those sending samples can be assured that they will be tested well and as promptly as our facilities will permit. Samples will be examined in the order which they are received.

To get fair tests it is necessary that the sample be taken from a bulk lot after a thorough mixing of the seeds. Samples of red clover, sapling clover, alsike clover, alfalfa, orchard grass, English blue-grass and rye grass should contain two ounces each. Samples of Kentucky blue-grass, Canada blue-grass, red top and timothy should weigh one ounce each. The samples should be put in a stout paper envelope, not in ordinary correspondence envelope because they are easily broken in the postoffice and let the seeds escape. Put your complete address, plainly written, on each envelope sent us and forward to the Division of Entomology and Botany, Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky. In writing to us always state whether both purity and germination tests are wanted.

H. GORMAN,
Head of Division of Entomology, Kentucky, Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

Attention Morgan County Farmers.

The Morgan County Farmers Institute will be held at the court house in West Liberty, Nov. 6-7. There will be an afternoon and evening session Wednesday and three sessions, forenoon, afternoon and evening Thursday.

The Institute will be addressed by R. C. Martindale, of of Wilkinson, Ind., Stanley F. Morse, of Springfield, Mass. Mrs. Helen B. Walcott, of Shelbyville, Ky., Dr. Lack, of Bourbonville, Ky.

Also a representative of the Good Roads Department and the State Forestry Department will be present and address the Institute. This meeting will be a departure from the old order of things and every man, woman and child in the county ought to hear the lectures. The women are especially urged to come and hear Mrs. Walcott's lecture on Dairying and Domestic science. EVERYBODY COME!

As a result of racial troubles at Coal Mount, a mining town near Tracy City, Tenn., one negro is dead and two others wounded, and one white man is injured. Over 200 shots were fired in the clash before officers succeeded in restoring order.

When the voters learn that Frick, representing the steel trust, Archibald, the oil trust, Gould the railroads, and Morgan both the railroads and the trusts, gave $460,000 to elect Mr. Roosevelt in 1904—more than 6,500,000 democrats contributed to the democratic fund in either 1896 or 1900—they can understand why the protected interests have been able to bleed the country so successfully.—Commoner.

RATLUFF.

G. W. Castle, of Louisa, State Inspector and Examiner, is here this week checking up our county officers. Mr. Castle is an "Old time democrat," was formerly an employ of the Treasury Department of the U. S. Government, and is exceptionally well posted upon current political topics.

His short speech Tuesday afternoon was a masterpiece and it is putting it widely to say that it stirred the democrats of this county as they have not been stirred during the present campaign.

Come again Mr. Castle—we are glad to bid you welcome.

Mr. Roosevelt's ludicrous mistake as to the demand for his nomination reminds one of the physician who visited an aged lady patient while he was under the influence of liquor. He examined her tongue and then felt her pulse. Scarcely had he touched her pulse when he exclaimed, "Madam you are intoxicated!" "I never tasted liquor in my life," she indignantly replied. "You are intoxicated," the doctor insisted. "Your pulse shows it." "Doctor," she rejoined, "if you will investigate you will find that you are feeling your own pulse."

Mr. Roosevelt has been feeling his own pulse and, of course, he found a demand for his nomination—a throbbing demand.—Commoner.

We are authorized to announce T. W. HAMILTON, of Yocum, as a candidate for the nomination for Assessor of Morgan county, subject to the action of the democratic party.

JUDGE ANDREW J. KIRK, FOR APPELLATE JUDGE

A MOUNTAIN MAN

JUDGE ANDREW J. KIRK.

All parties Are For Judge Kirk

SO SAY WE ALL OF US.

(Lexington Leader)

THE Louisville Evening Post offers a suggestion which the Leader gladly endorses. It is that all parties unite in supporting Circuit Judge A. J. Kirk for the vacancy on the Court of Appeals bench caused by the resignation of Judge E. C. O'Rear which was filled temporarily by the appointment of Mr. Robert H. Winn by Governor Willson. Judge Kirk is an ideal selection and is sure of the nomination and election no matter what happens in Kentucky or the Nation, but his indorsement by all parties would have a good effect. The Post says on this subject:

"The retirement of all other candidates makes certain the nomination by the Republican party of Judge Andrew J. Kirk, of Johnson county, for the vacancy upon the Kentucky Court of Appeals bench to be caused by the retirement of Judge R. H. Winn in November. Mr. Kirk is now Circuit Judge, and one of the best in Kentucky. The district is so overwhelmingly Republican that even in this year of certain Republican disaster the Republican nominee should win easily. Moreover, Judge Kirk is of the material out of which Appellate Judges should be made. The Democratic party will do a graceful act in not contesting the election, and Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt men can unite in the promotion of this Judge."

"So say we all of us." We believe the Leader and Post express the sentiment of practically the entire district and that the suggestions offered will be acted upon by the voters of the district.—Paintsville Herald.
